 Hi Mr. Goldman! Welcome to Faculty Feature Friday!

Congratulations on being announced teacher of the year! How does it feel?

 Super excited. Smiling even more than usual. It's definitely one of the proudest moments of my career .

Well deserved !!

Thank you

How long have you been teaching?

17.5 years, 17 of that at Whitman!

Wow! Impressive! What do you look most forward to every day as an earth science teacher ?

 Everyday is a new adventure. The same lesson will be totally different in every class. Kids are just so funny

What's the funniest thing you've heard a student say ?

I got top 3. A student asked me "What do you want to be when you grow up?" "Did they have earth science when you were a kid?" And "sometimes your the dog and sometimes your the fire hydrant!"

Hahahahahahaha

Tell me about this moment

So I love bikes. Really love riding, met my wife on a bike ride. I ride to school a few days a week year round(at least when it's not snowing). So it queens song bicycle just seemed right. Maybe the spandex took it too far!

Lol

How has it been for you working with technology during hybrid learning?

I hate the sound of my voice on video and my bald head always manages to catch a lot of light. I can't believe how impatient I've become with any lag....I grew up with dial up! But overall it's been way better than I expected.

Don't be so hard on yourself !

Any pets ? Pics if so?

Tell me about the extra curricular programs you're involved with

Currently I am the junior class advisor. Can't wait to build a homecoming float again and plan a junior prom. That's always been one of my favorite nights of the year. And wildcat science camp. It's awesome working with grade 1-6 kids just having fun with science. I have a staff of high school students and a bunch of a student volunteers as well. There's something really enlightening and enjoyable about working with students on a non academic level.

Wow! You do much! We are so lucky to have you!

And finally... who would you like see appear out Faculty Feature Friday?
